It's a Wonderful Town

There is so much to love about Bloomington, it's hard to know where to begin. But on my first visit here 19 years ago, what caught my attention straightaway was the downtown.

I couldn't live in a city where the core is dominated by impersonal, ubiquitous chains. In downtown Bloomington, the majority of our shops, restaurants, and galleries are one of a kind—founded, owned, and operated by people who live here. These local owners are passionate about what they do. They don't just know their businesses; they make it a point to know their customers and go out of their way to help them.

Downtown Bloomington is a real town center; it has evolved organically over decades and maintained its special character.

Neighborhoods were the second great attraction for me. Leafy Elm Heights, the artistic Near West Side, McDoel Gardens, Bittner Woods, South Dunn Street, Renwick, Hyde Park, and many more—all beautifully kept. People here take extraordinary pride in their homes and their neighborhoods.

Then there is Indiana University. The contribution that IU makes to our lives is profound. We cheer like mad for its athletic teams; its museums enthrall us; its professional schools generously share their expertise; and the Jacobs School of Music entertains us with more than 1,100 performances a year of opera, jazz, classical music, and ballet.

For our children, the presence of a great university and the robust influence of Ivy Tech

Community College–Bloomington means that, as one parent described it, “the importance of education is in the air we breathe.”

Beyond the university, Bloomington has attracted a diverse community of gifted artists and musicians who have chosen to make their homes here—often forgoing larger rewards and greater recognition in favor of a superior quality of life. Their talents are seen in our galleries, heard in our music venues, and enjoyed in dramatic performances and festivals throughout the year.

In the end, though, it's the people who make a place, and our town is filled with wonderful people with all sorts of interests and expertise. They are also kind, generous, and empathetic—supporting more than 1,000 charities and nonprofit cultural organizations.

Last but not least, we have our students—tens of thousands of them from all over the world. They help keep us young.

So, whether you live here, are thinking of moving here, or are just visiting, I hope you enjoy Bloomington and all that it has to offer.

If you haven't already, I predict you will fall in love with our town.

What's New at IU Health Bloomington

Progress means change and a number of new and exciting changes are happening at IU Health Bloomington Southern Indiana Physicians, beginning with a reduction in the waiting time for patients to see a primary care provider.

Immediate access to a primary care provider is now available at four IU Health Primary Care locations in Bloomington—995 S. Clarizz Blvd., 1302 S. Rogers St., 1520 S. Liberty Drive, 550 S. Landmark Ave.—and at 5921 W. Ind. 46 in Ellettsville. These IU Health Primary Care offices provide complete health care services including routine wellness visits, physical exams, men's and women's health screenings, preventive care, immunizations, health screenings, treatment for acute illnesses and minor injuries, management of chronic illnesses, and much more.

For broken bones, fractures, and sprains, walk-in hours are available at IU Health Bloomington Orthopedics and Sports Medicine. Located at 2605 E. Creeks Edge Drive, walk-in hours are 8 a.m.–4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

And for immediate care of a non-life-threatening illness or injury, IU Health now has two Urgent Care locations—one on the east side at 326 S. Woodcrest Drive, and a newly opened one at 482 S. Liberty Drive on the west side. Both are open 8 a.m.–8 p.m. Monday through Friday and 8 a.m.–6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Augmented Reality for Spine Surgeons

IU Health Bloomington neurosurgeons, Jason Voorhies and Bryan Wohlfeld, are revolutionizing their patient care with a state-of-the-art augmented reality (AR) tool that allows them to perform minimally invasive surgeries with extreme precision.

AR combines real-world and computer-generated information to create an enhanced, interactive experience for the user. A CT-like image is taken in the operating room and formed into a virtual 3-D model of the patient's anatomy. A special headset then projects the model for the surgeons to guide them during the surgical placement of screws that need to be incredibly precise.

(above) The new IU Health Bloomington at the Indiana University Academic Health Center opened in December 2021; (opposite page, bottom) immediate access to care is now available in Bloomington and Ellettsville at five IU Health Primary Care locations, two IU Health Urgent Care locations, and IU Health Bloomington Orthopedics and Sports Medicine; (below) Dr. Bryan Wohlfeld uses a state-of-the-art augmented reality (AR) tool to perform very precise and minimally invasive spine surgery. Courtesy photos.

“I think using this augmented reality system has a lot of advantages for the patient and the surgeon,” says Wohlfeld. “The technology makes the minimally invasive surgeries very streamlined and effective. This brings me up front and center to where I need to be.”

AR can allow for extremely precise, minimally invasive spine surgery, which typically leads to faster patient recovery times. And having this service in Bloomington means individuals can have the procedure close to home rather than having to drive to Indianapolis.

“I’ve been very happy with the results that my patients have achieved,” Voorhies adds. “I’ve had several patients who had just wonderful relief of their back pain and nerve pain, and they’re very happy.”

Denzil Ross Is New IU Health South Central Region President

In February 2024, IU Health welcomed accomplished health care and hospital administrator Denzil Ross as its new South Central Region president. Ross leads strategic and operational avenues for IU Health Bloomington as well as IU Health Bedford Hospital, IU Health Morgan, IU Health Paoli Hospital, and more than 60 ambulatory clinics and joint ventures encompassing more than 5,000 team members in seven counties.

“We are pleased to have a successful health care leader like Denzil leading the IU Health South Central Region,” says Brian Shockney, vice president of IU Health System Regional Operations (and Ross’ predecessor as South Central Region president). “Denzil’s strong background in operations of new hospital facilities, improving access and quality of care across many services, and recognition for strong community engagement will ensure our Hoosiers continue to have a strong partner in continually improving access and excellence in health care.”

As the new IU Health South Central Region president, Denzil Ross is responsible for leading more than 5,000 team members in seven counties.

Ross has served in a variety of health care environments over the past 15 years. He was appointed an America’s Essential Hospital Fellow in 2013 and is a member of the American College of Healthcare Executives.

Says Ross, “Southern Indiana is a beautiful place, and the kind welcome I’ve had is a true testament to the Hoosier Hospitality I’ve heard so much about.”
